WELCOME TO THE UNIVERSITY OF TERAMO

Dear student,
the University of Teramo is facing significant and substantial changes to relaunch your future.

We are turning into a real University Campus - with the main premises open until midnight, an inner canteen, a unified library, a language centre, a computer learning centre, technical and scientific laboratories, TV, radio and photography studios, a movie hall, a gymnasium and other sports facilities.

Teaching is changing as well - once linear dissemination of knowledge, it is becoming "inspired teaching" where you have a truly active role.

By means of new technologies and blended methods of e-learning, you will follow some "pre-lessons", in order to attend your classes, set to discuss critically the various topics - thus achieving mastery and self-confidence as well as encouraging genius which sets up you to gain experience and learning.

Tests and focus groups will enable you to keep in step, take exams regularly, thus optimising your timing.

Such teaching aims at making a difference: not just graduates, but all first-class graduates, since your excellence is the key to your future.

A real Campus has to involve its students: they shall live and feel it a home of their own, as this University does not only aim at developing top professionals, but also at growing responsible citizens. Thus, our aim is that you can study and - if you wish and prove to deserve it - have also the chance to get a first paid job.

Notices of open competition for entrusting students with the main and most qualified services carried out within the University itself will be tailored to you.

All of this has been named "Patto con lo studente" (Agreement with our students) and is available at the website www.unite.it. Such an opportunity will allow you to study and have a chance in your life.

Waiting for you,
All the best,

Dino Mastrocola
Rector

TERAMO AND ITS SURROUNDINGS

Abruzzo: the green heart of Europe

The Abruzzo Region is situated in the centre of Italy. The coast, overlooking the Adriatic Sea, is 129 km long. Inland, the region is mainly mountainous and covers a territory of 10.947 sq km.

Although there are no plains on the coast, a few can be found in the inner areas, such as the Fucino plain (Piana del Fucino), which was obtained by draining a lake with the same name.

The Province of L'Aquila is mainly mountainous, while hills prevail in the Province of Chieti. Pescara and Teramo, instead, show both mountains and hills.

The main city of the Abruzzo Region is L'Aquila, although Pescara is the financial and administrative heart of the area and its most populated city. Pescara was founded in 1927 after the union of Castellammare Adriatico and Pescara. It is now a distinctly modern city with a new railway station, an airport and one of the Mediterranean Sea's largest and most important marinas.

Defined as "Europe's Green Region" for its beautiful parks and natural reserves, Abruzzo is also rich in history and art and is famous for its culinary specialties. The most significant development areas are situated in the valleys of L'Aquila, Sulmona and Avezzano.

Particularly in the inner parts of the region, temperatures can be very low during the winter, falling below zero at higher altitudes. However, they are relatively warm during the summer, rising significantly near the coast.

The town of Teramo

During the Roman Empire, the town of Teramo was called Inter-amnia Urbs (meaning "the city between two rivers") and was both a colony and a municipality. Under Emperor Augustus and then Emperor Hadrian, Teramo lived its golden age, as evidenced by the presence of temples, baths, an amphitheatre and other monuments now buried under the new town. After a long period of prosperity, the Roman city was destroyed in 410 by the Visigoths of Alaric I, and this caused its decline. Later on, under the Longobards, it was annexed as a county to the Duchy of Spoleto. Norman and Angevin rulers followed until the mid-15th century, when the town became part of the Kingdom of Naples. Following the Austrian occupation during the War of the Spanish Succession (1701-1714) and a brief period of French rule in 1798, Teramo shared the vicissitudes of the Kingdom of Naples until 1860, when, together with the rest of Abruzzo, it became part of the newly established nation of Italy. Today Teramo is an important centre with small and medium-sized enterprises. It is also a lively tourist attraction, thanks to its strategic "mid-way" position, only 20 km away from the mountains – some of the most spectacular snow-capped peaks of the Central Apennine chain – and the seaside – 50 km of golden-sand beaches and non-polluted waters.

Once in Teramo, you might enjoy visiting the Gran Sasso mountain, with its skiing facilities and snow parks, and the beaches of Giulianova, Roseto degli Abruzzi, Tortoreto and Alba Adriatica.

The Cathedral

Situated in Teramo's main square, Piazza Martiri della Libertà, the Cathedral, built in 1158, is the most important monument in the town. Its aisles are divided from the central nave by round columns and pillars. Works such as the "Paliotto d'argento" by Nicola da Guardiagrele and the Polyptych of Saint Agostino (15th century) by Jacobello del Fiore and some frescoes dating back to the 15th century are noteworthy. The bell tower, completed by Antonio da Lodi in the 15th century, stands next to the Cathedral.

The Roman Theatre

The Roman Theatre, whose ruins occupy a wide area of the town centre, dates back approximately 30 B.C. Its 78 meters diameter tiers are made of travertine and are supported by twenty arches. They seated about 3,000 people. The remains of the Amphitheatre, dating back to the 13th century, are also visible on the right.

The Ancient Cathedral of Sant'Anna

In the former town centre there are the ruins of the ancient cathedral 'Sancta Maria Interamnensis'. Built during the Byzantine Age and renovated in the 12th century, it was burned down by the Normans in 1155. However, some Romanesque arches, a presbytery with Roman remains and a three-pane window with marble columns ('trifora') are still visible.

In the nearby square, a Roman bastion dating back to the 2nd century B.C. is also a worthy note; It is surrounded by several liberty style buildings. Next to Sant'Anna, a number of homes dating back to the Roman period have been discovered and recently opened to the public as part of an archaeological "walking tour".

Also opened to the public a short time ago, the Domus Leone is an ancient building dating back to the 1st century and containing an outstanding mosaic.

Other noteworthy monuments include Sant'Antonio's Church - built in 1227 according to the legend of San Francesco d'Assisi - with its beautiful Romanesque portal; the Convent of San Giovanni with its lovely cloister; the 14th-century buildings of the Palazzo Vescovile and of the town hall La Loggia; San Domenico's Church and Casa Capuani.

The Sanctuary of the Madonna delle Grazie

Built in 1153, it is situated outside the city centre, near a beautiful park. It is part of a Franciscan monastery founded around the middle of the 4th century.

Numerous conservation interventions have been made so far, also to its bell tower. The church shows stunning frescoes and a wooden statue of the Virgin dating back to the 15th century. A peculiar cloister is also present.

The Della Monica Castle

With its towers and battlements, this beautiful nineteenth-century castle was built in medieval style by Gennaro Della Monica.

The Astronomical Observatory

On the top of one of the many hills surrounding the city, the Astronomical Observatory of Collurania still contains the scientific instruments bought by its founder Vincenzo Cerulli in 1917.

The scientists today employed in the observatory study stellar astrophysics. Two projects in co-operation with the University of Teramo are currently under way.

In the suburbs

In the suburban area of the town, the most beautiful Romanic monument, showing the influence of Apulian art and a series of noteworthy frescoes, is Santa Maria di Ronzano in Castel Castagna. In the town of Atri, the Cathedral of Santa Maria is of great interest, with its marvellous Romanic structures and its splendid frescoes. At the foot of the Gran Sasso the Sanctuary of San Gabriele dell'Addolorata (Patron Saint of the Abruzzo Region) is visited by millions of visitors all year round. It hosts important religious events such as the International Festival of Sacred Arts. Next to the small old church, a large modern building, capable of housing 10.000 worshippers, was built in 1970.

Gastronomy

Eating in Teramo means discovering a unique gastronomic culture in which every dish has its history and tradition.

Setting out in search of local tastes, typical dishes, and culinary traditions in a town like Teramo means becoming a real researcher, delving into a new field of study. What one is asked to do when beginning the quest for Abruzzo's flavours is to approach the local cuisine with the attentive eye of one who wants to 'taste' and not to devour, to 'understand' and not to merely see, to fill his 'soul', not just his 'stomach'.

Typical dishes include the Scrippelle (similar to crêpes), the Mazzearelle (lamb's lungs and innards), the Pallottine (tiny meatballs) and the Virtù, a unique vegetable soup cooked every year in May.

THE UNIVERSITY OF TERAMO

The University of Teramo, established in 1993, comprises the Faculties of Law, Political Sciences, Communication Sciences, Veterinary Medicine and Biosciences, Agri-food and Environmental Technologies, and offers a wide range of graduate and postgraduate courses.

Research has achieved concrete results enabling the University to build a very close network of relations within the scientific community worldwide.

Indeed, thanks to conspicuous investments in scientific research, innovation has become the core of leading national and international projects.

Both postgraduate and vocational training guarantees high-level proficiency in several areas - legal professions, economics, social sciences, communication, management, politics, governance as well as animal health.

Advanced communication technologies and artistic projects are also a flagship of the University. Suffice it to mention the multimedia lab for television and radio production, and the music and theatre lab.

Internationalisation in and beyond EU Member States is a key element of the University of Teramo, which has set up fruitful collaborations with the centres of excellence all over the world.

Such internationalisation is underpinned by free-of-charge language courses provided by the University Language Centre for both incoming and outgoing students.

ICTs have always influenced both our way of thinking and teaching/learning methods. As a result, an e-learning platform and language, multimedia, television and radio laboratories have been implemented over the last few years.

STUDENT MOBILITY AND EXCHANGE PROGRAMMES

If you plan to spend a period of study abroad for research or training purposes, the University of Teramo can offer you a wide range of opportunities to invest in your future and develop your talents and skills. Various internationally recognised and accredited programmes are provided:

- ErasmusPlus (Study and Placement)
- Internationalisation projects

The Erasmus Programmes (Study and Traineeship)

The Erasmus Programmes were started in our university in 1994 in order to improve the co-operation with universities from all over Europe, to support students and teaching staff mobility, and to boost the development of joint programmes (both educational and professional) and courses. Within the Erasmus programme (mainly Study), thousands of foreign (incoming) students have attended our university so far. Teramo organises an Erasmus Welcome Day for them each semester. During the event students receive useful information about academic life and all the services offered by the University. It is also an opportunity to meet the Erasmus Institutional Coordinator, the Erasmus staff, and members of the ESN (Erasmus Student Network).

Incoming students enjoy a wide range of services such as guidance and tutoring, info and reception, Italian language courses (provided by the language centre), access to canteens, cafeterias, libraries, sporting facilities (CUS), cultural centres, technological facilities and more.

European citizens may enter Italy with a passport or ID card and are entitled to stay to study or work as long as they like.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION

All Erasmus students are required to have appropriate health insurance. For the Erasmus stay, it is usually sufficient to bring the EHIC (European Health Insurance Card) distributed by the Ministry of Health, which allows you to receive medical assistance in the EU countries and Switzerland during periods of study, work, or vacation. Scan the QR code on the right to visit the EHIC's dedicated Italian webpage and find a detailed account of how to obtain it, use it, its validity time and what to do in case of loss or theft.

Students coming from non-EU countries are strongly recommended to verify if there are any agreements between their coun-
